NEW ENTERPRISES.

Many of the towns of the South are inaugurating new enterprises. It is the great remedy for municipal dry rot. There is with us a great disposition to oppose everything except what our fathers engaged in. We lose sight of the fact, that in the days of our fathers, there were more industries than we now have. Tailors made the clothes for the people, cabinet makers made the furniture for our homes. Chair-makers employed a number of hands. Hatters furnished hats for all our people. No tinware was imported from other towns. Carriages were made at home. There were several wagon making factories. Even our earthen ware was made in Woodstock. Several tan yards that furnished leather have been closed. All the saddles and harness were made at home. Clocks were manufactured in Woodstock. The stoves were made from the virgin ore in our county. Foundries cast our plowshares and the plows were made by home mechanics. Carding and wool machines utilized our water power. Our people were clothing made of goods manufactured at home. Flax was raised by our farmers and linen was woven and the clothing was entirely of home manufacture. Woodstock had her rope walks. Our blacksmiths made their horse shoes and other hardware from iron from our own furnaces, and used coal from our own coal pits. Coopers made our casks and barrels. Our fathers were a domestic people. We have seen one after another of these industries yield to the enterprising spirit of other towns. We have boasted of our fertile lands, and have deluded ourselves with the idea that we were living off the proceeds of our rich valley, while the truth is that the profits of our farms have gone to enrich more enterprising communities. When we have the number of industries that have yielded to the change, it is not at all strange that a community, that kicks against everything of an enterprising character, should not increase in population. We may be able to live in an economical way, by bartering the goods of other towns and cities, but we cannot expect to be prosperous. If we desire prosperity, we must trample under foot our old prejudices and adapt our old ways to the times in which we live. We may not be able to establish large cotton mills or mammoth machine shops, but we can inaugurate small enterprises, which will give employment to our young men and attract others to the place. Banks and Building Associations may handle capital and make money for a few individuals, but the same amount of money invested in other enterprises would support hundreds of families and contribute greatly to the prosperity of the entire community. We must change or permit other towns to outstrip us, while our own children shall be compelled to contribute to the prosperity of other places. Let the city fathers and men of influence determine to inaugurate some enterprises in the town and we soon will be on the road to prosperity. Life is too short to postpone these things. If every man would determine to contribute to the general prosperity, instead of incurring himself in a shell of selfishness, all would be greatly benefited and the next census would show gratifying increase in the population of the town.

Robbed the Grave.

A startling incident, of which Mr. John Oliver of Philadelphia, was the subject, is narrated by him as follows: "I was in a most dreadful condition. My skin was almost yellow, eyes sunken, tongue coated, pain continually in back and sides, no appetite—generally growing weaker day by day. Three physicians had given me up. Fortunately, a friend advised trying 'Electric Bitters,' and to my great joy and surprise, the first bottle made a decided improvement. I continued their use for three weeks, and am now a well man. I know they saved my life, and robbed the grave of another victim. No one should fail to try them. Only 50¢ a bottle, guaranteed at B. Schmitt's Drug Store.
